Welcome to the Scholastic English Language Teaching Catalogue for 2020/21!

Our Popcorn ELT Readers collection is growing with the arrival of five new books: Trolls, The Secret Life of Pets, Jurassic Park, Jurassic World and How to Train Your Dragon 3: The Hidden World. With these exciting new arrivals, our Popcorn range continues to inspire children in the early stages of learning English. See pages 2–11 for more details.

We're also thrilled to be adding To All the Boys I've Loved Before and Hidden Figures to our collection of ELT Secondary Readers, aimed to motivate older students developing their independent reading skills. Find the full range on pages 12–22.

Help your students get set for success in the FCE or IELTS exams with our Timesaver for Exams series on pages 24–27. Each resource book provides ready-to-use photocopiable lessons and over thirty hours of exam practice, making them ideal preparation for university entrance in the UK and US!

Wishing your students a productive and successful year of language learning.

Bucky the Glowbunny

Suddenly Smurfette saw Bucky the Glowbunny. 'Quick!' shouted Smurfette. 'Jump on! Bucky ran into the forest. 'Yes!' shouted Smurfette. 'Go Team Smurf!' It was a big forest. Bucky ran for a long time. 'Let's stop to eat,' said Hefty. The Smurfs were tired. But they were happy and they were friends. 'Smurfy selfie!' said Brainy.

' said Smurfette. 'It's beautiful!' at these dragonflies!' said Brainy. ' dragonfly is very big!' said Clumsy. wasn't a dragonfly. It was Monty. And nel was behind him. ' shouted Hefty. The Smurfs ran and ran.

What's inside?

Malala Talks To United Nations

The United Nations decided to call her birthday, July the 12th, Malala Day. On the first Malala Day, nine months after the shooting on the bus, she talked to a big group of politicians and young campaigners at the United Nations. She talked of peace and love, and of children's problems in different countries.

'One child, one teacher, one book and one pen can change the world,' she said.

Malala isn't the only teenager with big ideas for change. Meet these fantastic girls from around the world.

CYCLING FOR FREEDOM

Most girls in Afghanistan can't choose their own husbands or wear short skirts or drive cars. And bikes are only for boys. Afghan women want to change that. They are in the first Afghan Women's Cycling Team. Men often shout angrily when they see them. But when women see them, some want to cycle too. The cycling can bring other changes for women in their countries.

MADISON

Hi! I'm Zach Cooper. I'm sixteen and I'm not happy.
My mum and I are going to a new house. We're from New York City, but our new house is in the country. It's in Madison. Madison is very small.
So why are we going? Good question. It's Mum's idea. 'Let's have a new start,' she says one day. And she finds a job in Madison.
You see, my dad is dead. My mum's sad. I'm sad. And I want to be nice to my mum. I'm going with her because I love her. And because I'm only sixteen!

MUHAMMAD ALI
MUHAMMAD
Level 2
This level is suitable for students who have been learning English for at least up to three years. It corresponds with the Common European Framework for users of CROWN/TEAM magazines.

SYNOPSIS
In 1954 a young boy has his new bike stolen. He's angry and ready to punch someone. At that moment, by chance, he meets a man who will change his life. The boy is Cassius Clay, and the police officer turns him into a boxer.
While he's concentrating on his sport, the young Cassius is also learning about life for black people in a country governed by white people. There is segregation in his home state of Kentucky, and he sees things that are wrong.
Cassius turns professional and wins fight after fight. He moves to Miami, to work with the best trainer in America. He works hard, he learns, and he develops his own style.
In 1964 he fights and beats Sonny Liston, the Heavyweight Champion of the World. The win gives him the confidence to show the world who he really is: a proud black man who has found a home in the Muslim religion. He changes his name to Muhammad Ali.
Ali continues to box, winning all his fights and becoming more and more popular. But then he refuses to fight in the Vietnam War because he believes it's wrong. For three years, he is not allowed to fight, but his actions help to turn the American people against the war.
When Ali is allowed to fight again, he has lost his best years. People still love to watch him and listen to him. He always has time for fans and ordinary people.
He continues to box long after his body has had enough. He learns that he has Parkinson's Disease.
Ali retires from the ring but not from life. He continues to make humanitarian trips all over the world, helping and inspiring people who have nothing.

HOW TO USE YOUR SCHOLASTIC READER
Choosing and motivating
Is this the right story for your class? Have your students heard of Muhammad Ali? Try to generate interest by showing a clip of Ali, or by reading aloud the first page of the story with dramatic atmosphere.
Organising
Plan a class reading schedule. Decide how many pages to set for reading each week. Select exercises from the Self Study section at the back of the reader and extra activities from this resource sheet to go with each chunk of reading. All answers are on page 5 of this resource sheet.
Using the CD
Students can listen and follow in their books. They can listen and then read. They can read and then listen. All these activities will help to improve their listening and reading skills.

Glossary
Go to 'New Words' at the end of the reader. The words with the class home. The Vocabulary sheet practises the new words.
Fact File
Set these as self-study or classwork. They are a sport for both boys and girls.
What did they think?
Get everyone to discuss the story. Compare opinions. Did you like it? Why?

THE REAL MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY

In Night at the Museum Larry is a guard at the Museum of Natural History. It is a real museum in New York. We asked some questions about this very interesting place ...

The famous blue whale

Q: Where is the American Museum of Natural History?

A: It's in Manhattan, New York. It's very near Central Park like in the film.

Q: When did the museum first open?

A: It opened in 1869. The father of President Roosevelt and some other people started it.

Q: Are all the people and animals from the film really in the museum?

A: Most of them. There's a big statue of Theodore Roosevelt at the door. There are also the bones of a mammoth. But it isn't the Pharaoh. The Pharaoh wasn't a real Egyptian.

Inside the Dinosaur Halls

What famous museums are there in your country? What can you see there?

A TERRIBLE THEFT

On 29 October 1964 there was a terrible theft from the museum. Some people opened a bathroom window earlier in the day. That night they got into the museum. They took some very famous jewels. Later, the police found most of the jewels in a Miami bus station. But they never found the Eagle Diamond. Where is it today? No one knows.

FILMING AT THE MUSEUM

Do we see the real museum in the film? Well, the pictures of the front are real. But they didn't film in the museum. They made a copy of the museum in Vancouver, Canada and filmed those scenes there. It's just like the real place!

MORE FAMOUS NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUMS

There are many other famous museums in the world. You can see many fantastic things there. Here are some of them:

The Natural History Museum, London
 Egyptian coffins

Smithsonian Museum, Washington DC
 Hope Diamond

Museum of Anthropology, Mexico City
 Aztec calendar

Ashmoolean Museum

CHAPTER 1 'Help me'

'Today is a good day,' said Detective Inspector Lestrade. 'Not for the Waters family,' smiled the policewoman next to him.

The Waters family were famous for their crimes in London. They took thousands of pounds from banks and the police could never stop them. They always left before the police arrived.

But today was different. After months of planning, Lestrade was ready for them. The Waters family were inside a bank, and there were police all around it.

'Nothing can go wrong this time,' said the policewoman. 'We've put ten men on top of the building, and another two on Mafeking Road. There are ...'

'Sorry,' said Lestrade. He had a new text message. 'Let me just read this.'

CHAPTER 22

Richard Parker got his name by mistake. A man called Richard Parker found a young tiger drinking from a river in a forest in Bangladesh. Mr Parker called it Thirsty and sold it to the Pondicherry Zoo. At the railway station in Bangladesh, an official filled in the papers for sending a tiger on the train. He wasn't paying attention. In the box marked 'Sender', he wrote Thirsty. In the box marked 'Animal's name', he wrote Richard Parker. Father laughed when he saw the papers. The tiger had a new name.

A CONVERSATION STARTER

Eating insects may not be everyone's idea of fun, yet around 30% of the world's population eat bugs as part of their traditional diet and research shows that insects may contain (1) levels of protein than conventional meat. Nothing is (2) to get your dinner guests talking than the opportunity to sample deep-fried or chocolate-covered bugs – their presence on the menu is a great conversation starter – but there are other ways for your guests to try insects if they don't feel (3) as that. Insects ground into flour may be (4) for them to swallow than insects with whole legs and wings. A food source in many different countries, crickets are probably (5) of all the edible bugs and they can be incorporated into your diet (6) than you'd think. Transform chocolate chip cookies into chocolate chip cookies – a (7) and more nutritious snack – by using both plain flour and cricket flour and chopped dried crickets dipped in chocolate.

2 Scientists are conducting research into edible bugs. Why do you think this is? Read the text from a science journal on page 35 and decide if the statements below are true or false.

- Livestock farming takes up considerably less space than insect farming.
- Farming methods for insects are much more environmentally-friendly than for conventional livestock.
- All insects have a much higher nutritional value than meat.
- Iron levels in honeybee larvae are the lowest out of all of the samples tested.
- Calcium levels in insects are generally higher than in meat.
- Iron foods have no potential disadvantages.

IELTS GRAMMAR comparatives and superlatives

As the world population continues to rise, one of the largest challenges is securing global food supplies. In a number of countries, bugs such as silkworms, termites and crickets are traditionally collected when other food sources are in short supply. Grazing land for meat is becoming more and more difficult to find and scientists are looking for alternative sources of protein which can be produced on a viable commercial scale. According to current research, insects can be farmed far more sustainably than conventional livestock because they reproduce at an even quicker rate and are significantly less demanding in terms of living space. They also do not produce so many greenhouse gases.

A recent report compares the nutritional content of several commercially available insect species with three more commonly consumed forms of protein (chicken, pork and beef) and found that insects had nutritional values that were just as high. Indeed the nutritional values of beef and chicken were considerably lower than at least three insects. In general, meat contained less calcium, and analysis of iron content showed that the levels in honeybee larvae were by far the highest of all the protein sources tested. In addition to the economic and environmental benefits of raising insects, which are becoming increasingly apparent, these results suggest that insects may be good foods to promote in areas where food insecurity and malnutrition are major problems.

On a more cautionary note, the figures also showed that some insect foods had a much higher content of sodium and saturated fat than conventional livestock. This suggested that insect foods should be slightly less suitable to put forward as alternatives to meat in countries where there are a number of diseases linked to over-nutrition.

What words are used to modify comparative forms? How about superlatives? Which modifiers suggest a strong degree of difference?

Use your answers with the information in the Grammar reference.
